They want you to know, 'You are here'

By Lee Peterson

Welcome to Somewhere, California.

In this town, someone once decided to somehow let everyone know just whose city limits they just entered.

And that isn't done just any old way.

Gone are the days when the run-of-the-mill "welcome mat" sign would suffice as the border marker that most people would notice when they passed from one valley town to another.

The entry signs have become more attractive as cities spend greater amounts to hire architects and design consultants to build monuments, not just signs.

With tiled city seals and night lighting, somewhere is not just anywhere, anymore.

Though Ontario is content with the metal signs that were posted five years ago, neighboring cities have been taking pains to declare their presences with something a little more permanent.

Pomona has decided upon obelisks, Chino has two-ton wooden monuments and Rancho Cucamonga is breaking new ground with customized dual gateway monuments.

The projects don't just mark borders anymore.

"It's more than just plunking a sign out there and saying, 'Here's Rancho.' They are all some sort of attempt to define an image and establish a tone, a positive tone," said Jack Lam, Rancho Cucamonga's assistant city manager.

Built with a mission-style architecture on manicured, park-like corners of vacant lots, the bookend monuments at Archibald Avenue and Fourth Street together cost $128,000 to construct.

Fortunately, the land was donated.

With the Archibald monuments now completed, the city will begin considering similar markers for every "gateway" into the image-conscious city.

Lam said the entry signs are to be financed mainly by the city's beautification fund, which is composed of money extracted from developers.

Future signs in Rancho Cucamong will be planned with the flavor of the streets they serve in mind, according to Landscape Designer Laura Psomas.

Rather than the historical look of the Archibald project, the monuments along Fourth at Haven and Milliken avenues will project a more modern image to reflect the business and industrial orientation of those streets, Psomas said.

In contrast, the city of Pomona opted for a single style of marker that it could locate at all major entryways. Three years ago the city purchased 20 concrete obelisks, at $1,600 Housing Coordinator Duane Solomon said that due to the deliberate pace of the procedure to install the 10-foottall obelisks, nine still remain in the city yard. Setting an obelisk in place costs from $5,000 to $7,500.

Most of the obelisks are placed on mid-street medians. Statistics on vehicles running into the stone columns put the obelisks way ahead, though one wayward car once managed to topple one of the 10,000-pound monuments.

The city of Chino uses a monument a little less hefty than their neighbor to the north, but their wooden entry signs still weigh in at two tons.

One sits in the median at Central Avenue on the city's northern limits, and a few more of the $3,000 markers are on the way, according to Howard Morris, Chino administrative assistant.

Morris said it is apparent that a few other cities are doing more than Chino, and it seems to depend upon how ambitious the local officials want to be.

Upland is one city for the most part resigning itself to the signs established several decades ago. City Manager Lee Travers said the character of the sign mirrors the conservative nature of the town. "It's been there forever," Travers said.

The living sign Travers speaks of is a network of planters mounted in a stone mound spelling out "Upland."

New signs coming in will be built in redevelopment areas where revenues are available to build such signs, Travers said, indicating the backburner priority of such projects.

Ontario's director of public services, Mike Teal, said it was enough for that city to stick with the blue and white, metal, pole-mounted sign.

"There's not much to designing them. It's best to keep with the standard sign, then you don't pay so much," Teal said.

The established college town of Claremont finally solved its sign problem more than 10 years ago when the city, the Chamber of Commerce and the Claremont Colleges all chipped in to build several signs throughout the city.

Fontana, in its general plan revision, has designs on following in Rancho Cucamonga's footsteps with talk of unifying community themes and major gateway entries.

For now, they remain with the generic city limits, population and elevation signs.

Al Irwin, the 53-year-old commander of the California Highway Patrol's Ontario office, announced his retirement July 29.

Irwin takes many memories along with him in retirement

recees as and accountrace westers.

By Lori Moody

It hasn't been all wrecks and traffic tickets for Al Irwin during his more than 20 years with the California Highway Patrol.

He oversaw the high-security escort for the King Tut exhibit as it traveled from the state line to Los Angeles, watched the launching of the first space shuttles as a commander in the Mojave area, and helped plan traffic routes during rock concerts at Ontario Motor Speedway.

"People have no idea what the CHP is involved in," said the 53-year-old commander of the CHP's Ontario office after announcing his retirement July 29.

Irwin said he will take away many memories after 29 years with the force. His last day on the job will be Aug. 31. A replacement has not been named.

"I'm going to miss the people," he said. "This has been my family for 20 some years. I think it's time to let someone else meet the challenges the department will face."

Irwin said he decided to retire this year because he had reached the maximum amount of retirement benefits he could receive and felt he had achieved everything he had set out to do. He is pursuing possible opportunities in other areas of public service.

"He's going to be terribly missed by our department and his division, both as a professional manager and a friend," said Chief Robert E. Hill, commander of the Inland Division.

Irwin began his law enforcement career in 1957 with the Ontario Police Department. He had moved to the city of Ontario from Ontario, Canada, as a 17-year-old with his father. The city at that time was populated by about 23,000

The San Bernardino (10)
Freeway was the only highspeed road in the West Valley.
It consisted of two lanes in each direction and did not have

Officers were paid $458 a month.

In 1959, Irwin became a CHP cadet with the hope of one day becoming commander. He moved up the ranks, serving at various CHP offices. He was appointed captain of the Monterey office in 1982, then a year later took over the command in Ontario.

He was instrumental in obtaining a federal grant for the Regional Intoxicated Driver Enforcement program which teamed pairs of officers together from different West Valley agencies. The program will conclude this year after seven years of operation.

Ban on outdoor watering draws to close in Upland

By David Madsen

Last week, Upland residents could start watering their lawns again after a two-day ban on outdoor watering was lifted July 28.

The ban resulted from heavy water use during the current hot spell that created low water pressure in many areas north of 16th Street.

"The water use was so heavy during the day (July 27), we weren't able to replenish our reservoirs at night," said City Manager Lee Travers.

The city was unable to refill its reservoirs after three of the city's eight wells were knocked down by a power outage.

Another well broke down and utility officals said it would take at least until July 27 before all the wells were fully operational

"We would like to thank all our residents who cooperated by conserving water," Travers said.

"Reservoir levels are back up so residents can water lawns, fill pools and wash cars again," he said.

"But we're still asking people not to waste water," he added.

Officals now hope the sporadic water shortages the city has experienced during previous hot spells are over for good.

Upland will boost its current water supplies by 15 million gallons a day when the Agua de Lejos Water Treatment Plant on north Benson Avenue goes on line Aug. 15.

The plant is jointly owned by Upland and several other area cities.

The plant is capable of treating 70 million gallons each day. Water for this plant will come from Northern California.

The city also has plans to build four reservoirs capable of storing 20 million gallons and drill five new wells.

Water storage has been a problem in the past, according to Larry Dilley, city water utilities director.

Eaton named to Montclair Counci

By Kimberly Heinrichs

Longtime Community Action Commission and Planning Commission member Paul Eaton was appointed councilman out of a field of 12 on July 28 by the Montclair City Council.

Eaton, 52, was chosen to fill the position left vacant when Billy Oldfield died June 29. The Planning Commission Chairman was selected by a 3-1 vote, with Councilman Walter Hackett casting a vote in favor of competitor Charles Imes.

Under current city law, the council had to appoint a replacement within 30 days.

After being sworn in, Eaton promptly took his seat and cast his first vote, joining a unanimous decision to hold a special election March 9 for the remaining three years of Oldfield's term. He said earlier that he will run for the post then, as did several other candidates will have a $15,000 price tag for the city.

The nomination period for the position will open Dec. 8 and close Dec. 29, City Clerk Marg Crawford said. That election.

During his oral presentation before the council. Eaton cited his long service to the city beginning with his appointment to the Community Action Commission when it was first conceived in 1970. He was appointed to the Planning Commission in 1974, where his fellow members named him vice chairman in 1977 and chairman in 1979.

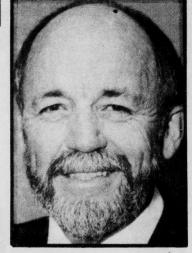

Eaton, an operating engineer with Morley Constructon of Los Angeles, had taken a community-involvement sabbatical after moving to the city in 1964 and felt it was time to get involved 18 years ago, he

The San Diego native had been active in his hometown of El Cajon, he said.

'The committee-tocommittee route doesn't always hold true," Councilwoman Dolly Lewman said afterward. "It just so happens that Paul has been (here) all these years and (he's) the right one. He's a good team member."

lackett raps appointment process

By Kimberly Heinrichs

During the Montclair City Council's interview session with a dozen prospective candidates Thursday, Councilman Walter Hackett criticized the appointment process.

He will propose to sidestep the appointment process and go directly to the people for elections in the future, he said. He hopes to squeeze it into Monday's City Council agenda, but failing that he'll bring it up at the Aug. 15 meeting, he said.

The council chose former Planning Commission Chairman Paul Eaton to take the seat until March, when it will be up for election for the remaining three vears

But Hackett said the council's appointment gives Eaton an unfair advantage in the election.

'You can't use the word incumbent (on the ballot) but still you have a little experience and that helps," he said.

He made the statement after hearing numerous complaints from residents and hearing prior to Thursday's meeting that Eaton had it sewn up, he said

"I was told two weeks ago that Paul would get it and I don't like it," he said. "I like Paul. (But) I think it was planned."

Eaton was selected on a 3-1 vote with Hackett opposing. 'I don't think I have a chance in hell of getting it through, but I'll give it a try," he said. Hackett's complaint again raised the issue of how to most fairly fill a position vacated midterm. This most recent vacancy came after Councilman Billy Oldfield died June 29, following a three-month battle with cancer.

Oldfield himself was appointed when Larry Rhinehart vacated his council seat after he was elected mayor in 1987.

The council chose to temporarily appoint members in 1978, said veteran council member Leonard Paulitz. Before that appointees filled the position for the remainder of the term, leaving voters with no say entirely, he said.

"If we didn't have this ordinance, Paul would be in till 1992 and I don't think that would be fair," Paulitz said. "In the good-old-boys days they would have agreed on Paul and that would be it.'

Rhinehart, who went through the interview process in 1978 and was not chosen, agreed that Hackett had a point worth discussing.

Lifetime later and continent away, brothers are reunited

By Rebecca Pavitt Raney

The last time John and Bill Lynch saw each another, World War II had just ended.

Bill had just come back from the war, and John was yo-yoing across the country. Now both are retired, both are widowed, and July 30 the brothers reunited.

John Lynch says he's not a drifter; he just travels a lot. Forty years ago, he came to California, where, according to his brother, he disappeared.

They told me the streets in California were gold-paved. So I came here to find my fortune," said John, a 68-year-old retired civil servant who lives in Upland.

He said he found his fortune but lost track of his family.

There were four brothers in the Lynch family, and they grew up in New York City during the Depression. Bill, a retired mortgage broker from Cape Coral, Fla., said the boys weren't particularly close.

"Things were not easy," he said. "We were all working hard. Boys are not as close as sisters are.'

Bill and his other two brothers, Tom and Maurice, settled in Connecticut. The 64year-old married twice and had seven children. On the other side of the country, John was married for 22 years and had no children.

"We knew he was here," Bill said. "We didn't know if he was alive or dead."

"We thought about each other and wondered ..." John started to say, but Bill cut him off.

"You didn't have to look far; you didn't look," Bill told him.

Bill traveled to California on business every year, and in the beginning he had hopes of

"I really thought about it," he said. "It got to be a fruitless search. California is such a big place; you can't find anybody.

John saw his brother Tom in 1968, compliments of the television show "What's My Line?" After that, there was silence until six months ago.

John's heart has failed four times during the last two years. But he said guilt, more than anything else, compelled him to find his brother.

To find his brother, John called the American Legion in Connecticut. He talked to someone there who knew Bill, and in two or three days Bill called him.

Six months later, Bill packed his family photographs and met his brother at Ontario International Airport.

Utah pioneers

Recently a meeting of the Daughters of Utah Pioneers was held in Claremont. The group is new to this area.

Fifteen Claremont women were present and initiated into the organization. Elections were held, and officers selected for the next two years. They are Mary Ann Ebbeler, captain; Julia Gailey, vice captain; Iva Del Anderson, secretary; and Anne Gustaveson, registrar.

Daughters of Utah Pioneers is a historical organization and its purpose is to perpetuate the names and achievements of men, women and children who were pioneers in the founding of Utah. This is accomplished by preserving old landmarks, marking historical places, collecting relics and histories, and by reviewing the lives of the pioneers.

Membership is open to all women in the area whose ancestry can be traced to settlement in the Territory of Utah before the transcontinental railroad was completed on May 10, 1869.

The Claremont group has been named Camp Indian Hill and is part of the Inland Empire County which consists also of Camp Euclid in Ontario and Camp Mt. Baldy in Upland. Anyone interested in joining can call 946-0540.

Court says no to citywide votes

By David Madsen

A ruling in a federal appeals court on July 27 could affect future elections in Ontario and other area cities where minorities make up a sizable percentage of the population.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court in San Francisco ruled that citywide at-large elections for City Council in Watsonville violated the rights of Hispanics.

The city of 27,000 never had a Hispanic council member or mayor prior to the suit being filed, despite Hispanics making up 48.9 percent of the population.

The court said the system of electing the council at large rather than by districts diluted the voting strength of Hispanics.

The 3-0 decision ordered the implementation of a new election plan in Watsonville that 'is consistent with the federal Voting Rights Act.

The ruling was hailed by local Hispanics as a major breakthrough in helping them gain representation at the city council level.

'Ontario is ripe — we're now going to be moving this agenda before the council and pressing for a commission to look into this," said Armando Navarro, an unsuccessful Ontario mayoral candidate in 1986.

"If there is no action, then we will proceed with litigation," Navarro said.

During his '86 campaign, Navarro advocated creating council districts to give Ontario's sizable Hispanic population representation on the council

The 1980 U.S. Census shows Hispanics comprising 27.1 percent of Ontario's population.

However, only one Hispanic, Gustavo Ramos, who was elected in 1972, has sat on the council in the past 20 years.

"Gustavo won because the vote was split between a field of 12 candidates, Navarro said.

"The Hispanic vote was very organized despite only 17 percent of the population at the time being Hispanic," Navarro Navarro estimated that Hispanics comprised as much as 40 percent of the city's population.

"It should have happened a long time ago," said Victor Ruiz of Ontario.

Ruiz is a veteran of several campaigns for Hispanic council candidates over the years.

"We have only had one Hispanic councilman. With districts, the Hispanic community has had a chance for somebody to represent them," Ruiz said.

Ontario Mayor Howard Snider denied that Hispanics have been excluded from office and said he did not see a need for districts in Like many of the other candidates, Eaton talked about the problem of deteriorating neighborhoods and the encouragement of residents to keep up their homes, whether through pep talks or financial incentives.

But Paulitz said he was concerned about the cost of an unscheduled election. It would cost more than holding a special election in March, which already has a hefty $15,000 price tag, he

In addition, an election cannot be held until 90 days after the seat is vacant, which would leave an evennumber council and the possiblility of split votes during that time, he said.

Hackett agreed that his suggestion would cost more.

R.C. councilman to run for mayor

By Lee Peterson

Rancho Cucamonga City Councilman Charles Buquet will make a bid to unseat incumbent Mayor Dennis L. Stout in the November election.

Buquet, who will have two vears left on his four-year council term at election time. said he wants to take over the chairmanship of the council to end a trend toward "a bigcity style of politics."

Though the city's population is now about 100,000, Buquet said it is possible to retain Rancho Cucamonga's image as a community rather than a city.

The mayoral race will pit two San Bernardino County employees against each other. Buquet is the county's safety director, and Stout is a deputy district attorney based at the Foothill Communities Law and Justice Center in Rancho Cucamonga.

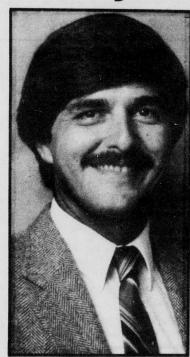

Buquet said he was considering running for mayor in 1986 when the post became converted to an office elected directly by the voters.

At that time, he said he had a conversation with Stout in which Stout said he only wanted to serve as mayor for two years.

With that in mind, Buguet said he decided to move aside and seek a second four-year term on the council rather than compete against Stout for the 2-year mayor's post.

Stout, who became the city's first elected mayor, said he has never planned to serve any certain amount of terms of office. "I don't look at it on the basis of terms as a professional politician

Rather, Stout, 40, said his agenda was to improve public safety, enhance commercial development and alleviate traffic congestion. "It will take (a total of) four years," he Buquet, 36, said he is still working on his campaign platform. But in terms of City Council decision-making, Buguet said he favors a team management approach; that the mayor is not separate from the council, but "simply the person who presides over meetings.'

Buquet said he aspires to no public office beyond that of mayor. He said he does not consider the post as a step toward an eventual attempt at higher office.

"If we are going to tackle and overcome problems, it will only be done by setting aside future political ambitions," Buquet said.

Buquet serves on the San Bernardino County Associated Governments (SANBAG) and the Omnitrans board of directors.

Buquet, who has a 13-yearold son, was remarried in June of this year. He was raised in the Rancho Cucamonga area.

"Like anything else, I believe the concept has run its course," Irwin said. "It's time to look to new things."

Irwin was involved in bringing multi-area task forces to combat speeders and big rig violations to the area. He received approval to use radar in the Diamond Bar area and similar plans are progressing for the Chino Hills.

Another goal was to obtain motorcycle patrols because of increasing congestion on area freeways. The proposal has passed muster by the Inland Division commander and is being reviewed in Sacramento.

'I feel very confident motorcycles will be assigned here in the very near future,'

His one regret, he said, was his inability to obtain more officers for the area. When he took over, there were 55 officers in the Ontario office. The station currently is authorized for 67.

The state Legislature increased the manpower of the force in response to freeway violence which made headlines last summer. Although the media coverage has lessened, the acts continue, Irwin said.

'Once the acts came to the attention of the press, it seemed like ... they did increase," he said. "I'm not suggesting they happened because of the media, but the public became more aware (and reported) them.'

Irwin received the Departmental Management Award in 1985 and the American Police Hall of Fame Honor Award in 1988 for achievement in public service. He is on the board of directors of the Boys and Girls Club of the Inland Empire and the Ontario-Upland Optimist Club.

He lives with his wife Dorothy in Calimesa. They have three grown daughters and six grandchildren.

'I'm the luckiest guy in the world," he said. "I'm going out with a lot more friends. I don't have a complaint in the world ... I don't have a fear of the future.'

Teen-ager skates way into national meet

THE RESERVE TO THE RESERVE TO

By Linda M. Hickman

When Cindy South heads for the roller rink, it isn't for the usual hour or two of casual fun with her friends. It's serious business.

In fact, she spends more than six hours a day rolling across the floor. This may be difficult during the summer months, but it is even more of a challenge when school is in session.

"As soon as I get home from school it's like a Superman thing," said South, 17. "I've got to rush around and get changed and get to the rink."

South's efforts have apparently paid off. Recently in Bakersfield she was named the 1988 Southwest Pacific Coast Roller Skating Queen, and her other accomplishments are numerous.

She received a silver medal in the United States Olympic Sports Festival in July, and earned another silver in the Pan American Games in Indianapolis, in which 78 countries were represented.

"The whole town was just for the athletes," she said. "What an experience that was.'

South has also won gold medals in United States Championships on three occasions.

She will be competing in a national competition in Lincoln, Neb., this month, and if she places third or better she will continue on to compete for the world championship.

According to South, roller skaters are capable of doing anything ice skaters can, with the exception of competing in the Olympics.

She said when she was a child, "I wanted to be just like the ice skaters but I wanted to do it on roller skates.'

One reason for this is that ice skating rinks are too cold, she said. Besides, said the Chaffey High School senior, "It was different.'

South said one drawback is that roller skaters "aren't publicized as much as (ice skaters). You tell someone you're an artistic roller skater and they automatically think roller derby.'

South has been competing since she was eight. Although she has never considered quitting, she said the travel and the hours of practice have left her without many of the normal elements of youth.

She said she has no time for leisure activities, or for friends. "I can only see (friends) at school because I can never call them and we never have time to go out," she said.

Although she is on her school's track team, she is unable to attend all of the meets and practices, she said.

"Given the choice, she's always skated," said her mother, Heide South.

South said she would like to turn professional in another eight years.

Clerk's office staff shortages costing money

By Rob L. Wagner

Staffing shortages at the County Clerk's office in Rancho Cucamonga have forced lengthy delays in sending convicted felons to state prison and is costing the county an untold amount of money.

The delays also have contributed to overcrowding at the Central County Jail and the Glen Helen Jail.

Court personnel have long complained of staffing shortages due to a countywide hiring freeze which has created mountains of unfinished paperwork. But court officials now say the lack of personnel has reached the critical stage.

Dennis G. Cole, supervising judge of the West Valley Superior Court, said Thursday that defendants sentenced to state prison are waiting as long as three to four weeks before being transported to Department of Corrections custody. The Rancho Cucamonga facility has experienced the delays for as long as six months, he said.

Reached for comment late Thursday, Superior Court administrator Martin J. Moshier said he was unaware of the

"This is a surprise to me,"

Moshier said. "I wasn't informed that things have gotten that serious over there (in Rancho Cucamonga).'

Moshier said the backlog "never should have happened because it is extremely costly to the county."

Specific cost figures have not been estimated.

Moshier said that two clerks will work through this weekend to finish all paperwork relating to the sentencing of defendants. Efforts will be made to ensure the backlog doesn't occur in the future, he said.

No county inmates can be transported to state prison until all court paperwork has been completed, Cole said. But only one clerk is processing the large volume of documents, causing the severe backlog

At least two clerks previously processed the paperwork which often allowed inmates to be transported to prison between one day and one week after they were sentenced. But when one clerk left the department the position was not filled due to the Inmates appearing in court recently voiced disappointment at the delays because they are losing work-time credits, according to Cole and supervising deputy public defender David Negus.

Inmates eligible for work programs in the state prison system are entitled to one day off their sentence for each actual day they serve in state custody. There is no such plan for county jail inmates. Many sentenced prisoners are losing as much as two weeks of time off due to the backlog of paperwork, according to court officials.

"Our clerk's office is impacted to the point where the paperwork is not being done," Cole said.
